

2015 China Goes Global CALL FOR PAPERS

China has become a powerful political and economic actor on the world stage. In 2012, China has become one of the largest global investors, according to the joint statistic report by the Ministry of Commerce, the National Bureau of Statistics, and the State Administration of Foreign Exchange in China. Outward FDI amounted to USD 87.8 billion. As of the end of 2012, 16,000 Chinese investors had set up nearly 22,000 overseas enterprises in 179 countries and regions. Despite the impressive growth in foreign direct investment flows from China, the stock of foreign investment held by Chinese investors, compared to the size of the Chinese economy and the size of the total world investment, is still relatively small. This means that the growth of outward foreign direct investment from China is likely to continue its acceleration.

Many questions arise with the rise of China and its transnational companies, both state owned and private. What are the motivations of Chinese state owned enterprises? How are different firm configurations and industries internationalizing? What role will Chinese firms and government play in the future value added chain of production and consumption? How will the rise of China affect bi-lateral and multi-lateral international relations? How will institutions evolve in response to changing governance, nationally and internationally? The answers to these questions and others can be derived from different analytical views, including Economics, Political Science, International Business, Sociology and Public Policy. Research is also sought from the various business disciplines: finance, marketing, management, etc. We invite multi-disciplinary outlooks and analyses of the globalization of China.

It is worth to highlight three distinctive features of annual conference and, specifically, the forthcoming 9th annual conference of China goes Global. First, the conference is developmental in nature and we invite collaboration, constructive feedback, panel discussions, and mentoring. Best papers are also given the chance to be published in the International Journal of Emerging Markets, a scopus ranked journal by Emerald. The conference will have both posters and competitive papers to accommodate papers with different levels of development. Second, we have fun. In addition to insightful papers, the conference also includes a performance, reception, company visit, and great people. For the review of CGA 2014 conference, including photo gallery, please see: <http://www.chinagoesglobal.org/past-conferences/photos-from-past-conferences/>. Finally, the conference is always accented with world re-known keynoters from the academe and business. For a list of previous keynoters, please see: <http://www.chinagoesglobal.org/past-conferences/previous-key-noters/>

Submission

We encourage completed papers but also accept works-in-progress papers and roundtable discussion panel proposals reflecting a range of theoretical and practical perspectives on the globalization of China and Chinese institutions, firms and people.

Submissions must be done online: <http://www.chinagoesglobal.org/conference/paper-submission/>

Submitted papers will be double-blind reviewed for consideration in the conference. Please submit your paper through our online submission system no later than April 15, 2015. Papers should follow the author style and referencing guide provided on the conference website. By submitting a paper, all authors also agree to review up to 3 papers.

The conference provides an ideal opportunity for scholars and practitioners, as well as Ph.D. students to share and discuss their most recent high-quality work with other experts in this research field. Selected papers will be published in an annual special issue of the International Journal of Emerging Markets (Emerald Publishing).
